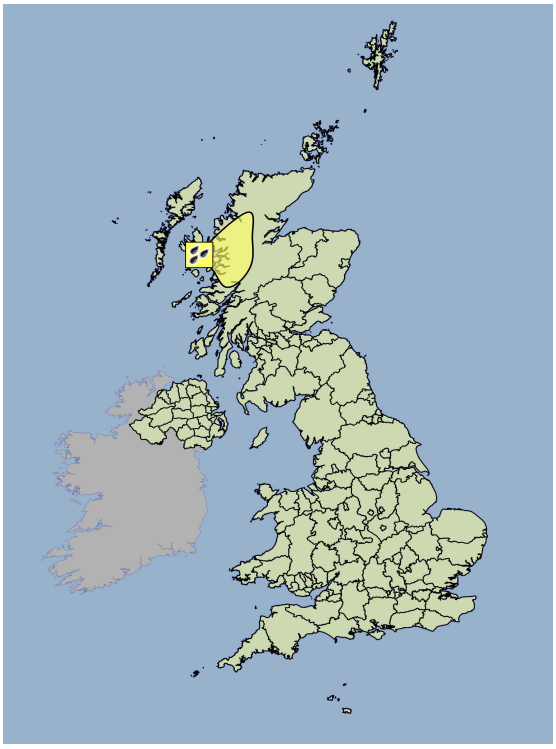
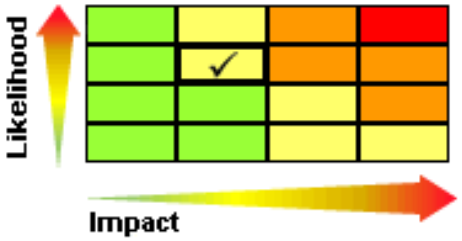
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
A strong southwesterly airstream will bring a spell of wet weather to the West Highlands. While outbreaks of rain will arrive on Thursday, the heaviest rain and any impacts are likely to be on Friday. Rainfall totals of 30-50 mm are expected widely within the warning area with isolated peaks of over 80 mm possible, while an active cold front on Friday morning could bring 10 mm in an hour. Strong to gale force southwesterly winds will add to the difficult driving conditions. Once the rain clears it will quickly turn colder with showers turning increasingly wintry on Friday evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 27th Nov 2015 until 15:00 on Fri, 27th Nov 2015

Following some wet weather on Thursday afternoon, rain will turn heavier on Thursday night and Friday morning, before turning showery during the afternoon. Be aware of the risk of some low level disruption due to localised flooding of roads.
